Ve Conference Games Scheduled State This Week

Bobcats Prepare for Jonesboro at Hope Friday Night

ZEBRAS TO PLAY TWO

North Little Rock Goes to El Dorado for Tough Battle

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—Pine Bluff's Zebraws, with their redoubtable Hutson twins, play two games this week to give the Arkansas high school conference its heaviest schedule of the season to date.

Five conference games are booked, with the Fort Smith at Pine Bluff clash Tuesday night putting together two of the circuits' topnotch elevens. Neither has been beaten this season although Fort Smith has not yet played a conference game.

Friday night Pine Bluff meets Fordyce which has been voted 1 around by non-conference as well as conference teams for two seasons. The Zebraws are expected to win in a walk. Little Rock, victors by one point over Blytheville last week, take on the Hot Springs Trojans here. The Spas boys were beaten by El Dorado last week and Little Rock is now favored to win.

El Dorado plays host to North Little Rock which showed marvelous recuperation against Forrest City after losing its first conference game to Russellville. Jonesboro, already defeated by Hot Springs, journeys to Hope for what probably will be another trimming at the hands of the powerful Southwest Arkansas contenders.

College Football

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—Arkansas gets to see four college football games this week but only one of them has any bearing on the slowly developing title race.

Arkansas Tech, victor in two contests against strong out-of-state opponents, goes to Arkadelphia Friday to test the Henderson State Teachers who are now riding the top of the standings by virtue of a win over Hendrix. Henderson lost to Stephen F. Austin at Nacogdoches, Texas, last week, and Tech rates to win the interstate contest.

Hendrix of Conway journeys to Jackson, Tenn., for a game with Union University.
Arkadelphia also will be the scene of a game between Louisiana State University's Northeast Center and Ouachita, which was idle last week. Southern Illinois Normal comes to Jonesboro for a game with Arkansas State.

Roosevelt Asked to Mediate War

Germany Hopeful American President Will Take Peacemaker Role

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Senate leadership blocked temporarily Monday an effort of Senator Johnson, Colorado Democrat, to repress the chamber and give President Roosevelt a free hand to work for European peace.

Johnson told the chamber "the whole world would be gratified" if the senate would recess for three days. This, he said, would be considered a sign that the United States wanted peace in Europe, and that the people were counting on the chief executive to do what he could to effect it.

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Germans evinced great interest Sunday in the wave of sentiment in the United States Senate favoring mediation by President Roosevelt in the European war.

Nazi officials have tried to leave no doubt that Adolf Hitler would welcome a peace initiative from the president of the United States and would be in Washington said many senators, both proponents and opponents of the administration neutrality bill, favored Mr. Roosevelt's stepping in now as a peacemaker.

One result of attention being given in Berlin to what goes on in Washington has been adoption of an English term—"cash and carry"—into German speech. "The Germans have learned to use it while studying congressional debate on the Roosevelt administration's neutrality proposals."

Export Liquor Tax Legality Upheld

State to Collect Back Taxes Blocked by Injunction

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court Monday upheld the right of the state to levy an export liquor tax, a source of revenue abandoned by the legislature last winter after less than a year's trial.

Reversing a chancery court decree, the high tribunal ordered dismissal a permanent injunction under which Claude Collins, Inc., West Memphis rectifying plant, had withheld payment of $1,477.20 export tax to the state.

The Department of Revenues said the tax money would now be collected by the department.

Criminal session of Hempstead circuit court opened Monday at Hope city hall with the trial of Otha Meggerson, negro, charged with stealing a yearling from Joe McClain.

The trial required most of the morning, a jury returning a verdict of guilty at 11:30 o'clock and fixing punishment at three years in the state penitentiary.

Britain, France Stand Pat—French Report Germans Attacking

MOSCOW, Russia.—(AP)—Soviet Russia threw its weight behind Adolf Hitler's peace gestures Monday in an editorial in the government newspaper Izvestia, accusing Great Britain and France of "returning to the Middle Ages" for waging a war to "exterminate Hitlerism."

At the same time it announced that Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotov had reached a quick decision Sunday night with leaders of the German trade delegation.

British, France Stand Pat
LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons Monday that Britain and France are "in complete accord" as to the purposes of this participation in the European war, which they have frequently expressed, and that any more specific statement of their war aims would have to be evolved through consultation of the two powers.

Chamberlain's statement was in reply to a question by Laborite Arthur Henderson, who asked "whether it is the policy of His Majesty's Government to publish in due course of time jointly with the French government a specific statement of war aims based on principles already enunciated."

The condition of the crop on October 1 was 68 per cent of normal, compared with 70 per cent a month ago, 66 per cent a year ago, and 61 per cent average condition October 1 for the 10 years 1928-37.

The indicated yield of lint cotton was reported 23.7 pounds to the acre, compared with a forecast of 24.7 a month ago, 23.7 two months ago, 23.8 produced last year, and 19.8 for the 1928-37 average yield.

France Can't Win Offensive War; British Are Vulnerable

If the Allies seem to be waging a "waiting" war on the Nazis, it may be because the British are extremely vulnerable and unprepared and the French cannot expect to lick Germany by an offensive.

This is the conclusion drawn from Liddell Hart, eminent British historian and military authority, in his latest book, "The Defense of Britain," just published by Random House.

A combination of factors adversely affect Britain, Hart declares.

Britain began her military preparations appallingly late as was evidenced by the capitulation at Munich just a year ago.

The British Isles are the most vulnerable to air attack of all big countries.

It is doubtful whether the powerful British fleet is equal to the challenge of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo fleets, assuming Italy should join the Nazis and Japan threaten British action in the Far East.

Finally, there is the relative unpreparedness of the French, particularly from an offensive viewpoint.

Time Is Weapon in This War
True, says Hart, the Allies are arming today at a tremendous rate. They may hope to offset the German strength, even surpass it.

Meanwhile, here are some of the factors in the British picture as Hart sees them.

"There is now," says Hart, "a serious threat of a new kind of invasion (in Britain) by 'ground forces,' though not by an 'army.'"

"In the Russian maneuvers of 1936 a force of 1200 men, together with 150 machine guns and 18 light field guns was carried 10 miles by troop-carrying aircraft and dropped on an aerodrome behind the enemy's front. Within eight minutes of the release of the parachutes the force had assembled on

Lonesome Houses

Deserted, lonely, by the road it stands. A wee-bit house, time-worn and scarred and gray. So like a little empty nest dropped down. Sometimes by lawless winds in boisterous play. The sagging blinds swing lily in the wind. The old door step that once thrilled at the touch. Of hurrying feet, is covered now with dust. Such is the price we pay. Life asks so much.

I wonder sometimes if old houses long To hear a sudden slamming of a door. Glad voices calling out from room to room. The rush of hurrying feet across the floor. Forsaken, lonely, by the road it stands. Undeveloped by the life that hurries by. I turn to go, and wonder if that sound Was but the wind. Or do lonesome houses cry?—Selected.

On the Gridiron

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Sympathy came a trifle too soon for a couple of football teams down here in the Southwest.

The wake they held for Texas, a team that won only one game last year, has ended. Last rites for Arkansas, a pre-season giant that lost a miserable game to vastly underrated Mississippi State, have been indefinitely postponed.

The morning has shifted to other quarters, notably Texas Christian, the defending champions. But the corps is also liable to walk there any day. To get to the cause of Texas, a pathetic sight to most fans just a couple of weeks back. Today, the boys of Bible are handing out the greatest shocks of the season. Saturday's 17-7 smashing of Wisconsin, a team the handicappers figured was 13 points better, was proof that those Texas sophomores want to play football.

N. Y. Yanks Win 4th World Series Title

Yankees Take Advantage of Four Red Errors for Victory

CROSBY FIELD, CINCINNATI.—(AP)—In one of the deffiest finishes in all World series history, the Cincinnati Reds' defenses blew up Sunday to let the New York Yankees win their fourth straight world championship by a 7 to 4 10-inning victory in the fourth game of the 1939 fall classic.

After fighting back from an early disadvantage into which home runs by Charley Keller and Bill Dickey had dropped them, the National League champions fell apart like a 1906 jello pie in the ninth and tenth innings, and the Yankees, taking advantage of every break, scored five times in those two frames on four hits and four Reds' errors, to pull out the decision.

And for 32,794 fans, lifted to roaring heights of delight by the Reds' seventh inning three run scoring spurge, this finish was a heart-breaker. For it came about on a collapse of the one feature that stood out for the Reds in the first three games—their fighting feilding.

This lapse of the Rhineland defenses topped off an up and down collection of performances by the five hurlers who saw action. Tail Paul Derringer started for the Reds but the loser was Bucky Walters, who took over in the eighth, and thus was charged with his second defeat of the set.

For the Yankees, Johnny Murphy, the square-jawed Irishman with the excellent control, received credit for the first series victory of his career, although he saw action in relief roles in each of the last three sets, after Oral Hildebrand had retired because of an ailing side and Steve Sudra had been tagged for the Reds' first three runs.

Play Three Games With a Broken Leg

Finds Excuse to Give His Mother for Dropping Punts

ATLANTA, Texas.—Physicians after examining the left leg of Pete Whately, Atlanta high school backfield star, here Saturday stated that the leg had been broken for three weeks. During this time Whately has played two entire games against Pine Tree and Linden and also two quarters in Friday night's game with New Boston.

Besides he has scrimmaged daily until last week. Never, until Saturday morning, had Pete or anybody else suspected that the leg was broken. Pete recalled that the leg was first hurt on Saturday during scrimmage three weeks ago which tallies with doctor's calculations that the leg had been broken for three weeks.

Pete complained of the leg Saturday morning and called Guy Stevens, Atlanta high school football coach. He wanted to go to a chiropractor and have the "charley horse" jerked out. Stevens insisted on seeing a doctor first. Upon examination the startling news was learned. The short 140 pound back was very optimistic about the injury and insisted he would be back in uniform before the season ends.

"Win for Whately," became the slogan of Pete's team mates as they heard the news. Atlanta meets Mt. Vernon, a class AA school in Mt. Vernon Friday.

Whately, while playing on the broken limb Friday night against New Boston dropped two punts and fumbled once. Upon finding out that the leg was broken Pete commented with a grin:

"Mam was going to spank me for dropping those punts last night. I guess she will let me off now."

CHURCH NEWS

Methodist Revival
Large crowds continue to meet Reverend Spore in his revival meeting at the Methodist church. "Methodism Marches on," is a slogan that could appropriately be applied to the response at this meeting. The services Sunday brought many in attendance from limits of the local church and bringing interest from the community at large.

Reverend Kenneth L. Spore is giving sermons which have been second to none heard in this community in recent years, and soul-inspiring in his application of scripture to practical, every-day living.

Sunday was the midway point of the fifteen-day meeting. There is evidence that much good is being done. This week various organizations of the church will be present in groups at the night meetings to give further interest and help for the remainder of the time.

Services are held at ten o'clock in the morning. Young People's meeting at 8:45, in charge of Reverend C. B. Wyatt, the singer, and services again at 7:30. The entire public is invited to attend any or all of these services.

THE THEATER

At the New

Bright, sparkling, and played in a lively tempo, "Sorority House" with Anne Shirley and James Ellison in the leading roles, came to the New Theater Sunday and continues through Monday. It is one of the most unique college pictures screened in many years.

Detouring from the usual campus formula, it throws the spotlight on certain Greek-letter campus groups. Ann Shirley is delightful as a small town girl who realizes a cherished ambition when her father a grocery store owner, manages to get enough money to send her to college. There she learns that all the girls yearn to join sorority, but only daughters of wealth and social position are preferred.

James Ellison turns in a fine portrayal of the most popular upperclassman on the campus.

The second double feature "Smuggled Cargo" which stars such names as Barry Mackay, Rochelle Hudson, George Barbier, Ralph Morgan, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards and John Wray.

Italy in the Balkans
BUDAPEST, Hungary.—(AP)—Italy was reported Sunday to have offered new friendship pacts to Yugoslavia and Hungary, adding to the relief of tension which has dominated Southeastern Europe since the war began.

Italian radio broadcasts received here said the negotiations, which many observers believed would offer mutual assistance pacts to the two countries, were under way. Reports of the negotiations were confirmed semi-officially in Belgrade, and similar reports were heard in Bucharest.

With Italian diplomacy so far directed at preserving neutrality in the conflict, the small neutral nations of Southeastern Europe saw their chances of staying out of the war heightened by these reported negotiations. Diplomats in this section welcomed prospective collaboration among Italy, Yugoslavia and Hungary as a possible counteraction of the German-Soviet bid for domination in the Balkans.

Mussolini Gets Busy
Balkan diplomats said Adolf Hitler's speech Friday declaring Germany and Soviet Russia together would settle all Southeastern Europe's problems had spurred Italy to action to establish her own position in a "lebensraum" (living space).

Since the small countries of this area dread war more than they relish the thought of getting revenge for some old or fancied wrong, diplomats believed Italy would maintain peace and neutrality of the area.

An authoritative Yugoslav source said the current negotiations were "only the beginning of something much bigger than a mere treaty." Should Yugoslavia and Hungary draw closer to Italy, diplomats said, Roumania and Bulgaria might well agree to follow suit.

Yugoslavia and Bulgaria agreed last summer to pursue a common foreign policy, while Yugoslavia and Roumania are old Balkan allies and neither thus far has assumed foreign obligations without consulting the other.

Thus with Hungary and Yugoslavia as a starter, an Italian-led Balkan front might expand quickly. Italy recently has taken steps to win the confidence of Turkey and Greece, withdrawing troops from the Greek frontier in Albania.

Russia Making No Demand
Other cheering news in the Balkans has been the decrease of armed forces by Roumania and Hungary along their common frontier. It was disclosed

WE, THE WOMEN

In times of peace a dictator can tell women that their place is in the home—and can even see that they stay there.

But when war comes, he has to backtrack. With every strangled man a soldier or potential soldier, much of the "men's work" falls to women.

It fell to them in the last war, and it is falling to them in this war. In fact, the World War is credited with giving women their first taste of equality in most countries—by opening up all kinds of opportunities.

So, while war destroys women's happiness—and takes away almost everything she considers precious—it does give her an economic and professional chance, never equalled in time of peace.

The last time war set the German women free, their participation in government in the professions, and in business was short-lived.

Nazis Sent Them Back Home
As soon as the Nazis came to power they showed women back and ignored all they had accomplished in the war years.

This time—no matter how the war ends—let's hope the women will have more backbone. That they will stand together and refuse to be put back tonight this action had been taken on the suggestion of Yugoslavia.

Doubtly cheering to Roumania was the assurance—published in Roumanian newspapers for the first time today—from Moscow that the Soviet intended to make no demands upon Roumania in the negotiations at the Kremlin with Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu.

Thus apparently Roumania was relieved of any immediate threat of a simultaneous invasion from Hungary and Soviet Russia to regain the former Russian province of Bessarabia and the former Hungarian province of Transylvania.

Anti-German Tone
Russia's role in Southeastern Europe is expected to be clarified when Saracoglu returns from Moscow. The Turkish press commented today in strong anti-German terms, giving the policies are further co-ordinated in the conversations in Moscow they may not be as favorable to Germany as Berlin expects.

The Hungarian trend was shown by the newspapers which continued to publish Italian articles praising Italy for her "political clear-sightedness." One Italian dispatch said, "In Hungary, as in Yugoslavia, Roumania and Greece it is recognized that mainly owing to Italy no blood is being shed today in Southeastern Europe."

SERIAL STORY

WORKING WIVES

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Dolly arrives as Marian prepares to leave for the hospital. Marian explains everything, her hopes of regaining Dan's love, her efforts to repair the wreckage of their marriage. Then she asks Dolly to call the doctor. "It's going to happen very soon."

CHAPTER XXX

IT was after midnight. The hospital was quiet. The corridors were dark except for shaded lamps on the nurses' desks. Now and then a red light flashed over a door, reflecting itself in the shining floor. In a brightly lighted room, Marian was being lifted to a rubber-tired cart. She was pale, her eyes black with suffering. She caught Dolly's hand.

"You'll go with me?"

Dolly raised her eyes to the still genial face of Dr. Moss. "May I?"

He nodded.

Marian said, "I'm going to be brave, Dolly. But if I should forget myself, if I should beg for Dan, don't weaken, don't send for him. I've explained how I feel about Dan. I want to be ready for him. Promise me."

"I promise."

"And—if anything should happen—"

She bit a quivering lip.

"Yes, dear."

"Tell him that I was brave. Tell him that I was happy to have his baby. Try to make him understand how much I love him—how much I have always loved him."

"You'll tell him yourself, darling."

Dolly held her hand as the cart was trundled down the quiet hall. She stood by staunchly. When Marian cried out, "Dan—Dan—" she soothed her gently. After that there was blessed oblivion for Marian.

THE sun was making a rectangular patch on the carpet when she awoke. She stirred and Dolly went to the bed. She kissed Marian's white cheek.

"It's all over, darling," she said.

"A girl?"

"Yes. Dr. Moss says that she is the most beautiful little girl."

"A beautiful little girl. Her name is Glad—Glad Harkness."

Marian's long lashes fell, she was asleep. She looked very young and small in the high white bed.

They took Glad home after two weeks. Randy and Dolly and a strangely shaken Marian, took her home. Randy had been doubtful about the small apartment. He had suggested larger quarters and nurses, a fleet of them, he said. Marian had refused.

"No," she had said. "Glad's father is supporting her."

TRYING weeks followed. Marian's strength was slow in returning; the baby's food formula had to be changed and changed again. The summer heat came early, long scorching days, humid nights. Steadfastly, Marian cared for the baby, letting the housework slide, resting when the baby slept.

Her love for the child was something like worship; she watched her development with a half fearful awe. To Marian, the tiny infant was a miracle, a God-given miracle.

Randy and Dolly came every day. They quietly installed comforts, an electric refrigerator which the apartment did not afford, fans, linen sheets, which were cooler than muslin. Marian grew thin, blue shadows made her eyes enormous, her hands were rough from daily laundry work.

Dolly expostulated, she begged, she even became angry. Randy talked earnestly to Marian. They were friends. What were friends for, anyway? He'd send a maid, two maids—better still, he'd find an apartment near the lake.

Marian stood firm. Wearily she reiterated the old theme. "Dan says to stick it out. Dan says if you accomplish a thing yourself, you have pride."

"But Dan would send you more money if he knew," Randy argued. "You're losing weight—you'll be sick."

"But Glad is gaining—she's all right."

"She'd gain faster—"

"Dr. Moss says she is perfect."

Marian laid a beseeching hand on his arm. "I'd crawl on my knees to ask for help if the baby needed it. But she doesn't. Dan and I are providing for her. Please let me do this. Please let me do it the hard way."

THEY let her alone after that, standing by, ready. July was a nightmare of burning heat and parched winds. Toward the end of July, Glad developed a heat rash, she fretted and had a little fever. Marian's hollow eyes became frenzied pools. That was when Randy and Dolly stepped in.

Dolly had said crossly, "I guess you can pay a visit to your best friend. I guess Dan wouldn't mind that."

They drove for hours, finally stopping at a white cottage in the cool darkness of deep woods. Lake Michigan danced and sparkled beyond the trees. A fresh little breeze rustled the leaves. Marian stumbled as she stepped from the car and Randy carried her to a cool, green and white bedroom.

Doing so, he muttered, "And we didn't get you here a moment too soon, young lady. In fact, hardly soon enough."

THE August days were like a blissful dream. Marian lay in her bed, sleeping, rousing to look with contented eyes at the baby who, under the able ministrations of the nurse, lost her rash and fever immediately. After a few days, Marian moved to the wide porch swing, there to idly hope and plan and dream.

The weeks hurried by and she awoke each morning to new strength. She could feel energy and vitality humming through her veins. She swam and rested, she tanned a beautiful brown, rich color dyed her cheeks and lips.

The baby was a rollicking, pink and white bit of gladness.

With the coming of September, Marian realized the time had come to think about the long trip to Portland. Marian wanted to go, she was well and strong, the baby was old enough to travel. Instinctively, she shrank from going. It meant so much, that journey to Portland, so very much. Dan's letters had not shown one sign of interest, had given her not one shred of hope.

ON Sept. 10, Randy's chauffeur took them back to the apartment. Dolly had made it ready. There was food in the refrigerator. The rooms had been cleaned and aired.

Marian set a day for her leaving and she worked toward it feverishly. A few new clothes for Glad, who had outgrown everything, a few conveniences for travel. She had her own old dresses changed a bit and cleaned.

On the last night, with nothing left but a bed and one chair, these to be called for on the morrow, Marian sat in the bare emptiness, the baby in her arms.

"We're going to see your daddy, Glad," she said softly.

The baby frowned and kicked and threw her little arms about. She had a straight, strong back and straight, strong legs. Marian often likened her to a rose bud—if a rose bud could have shining blue eyes. Her hair was definitely reddish and Marian loved it. The ends duck tailed engagingly, it was thick and silken. She laughed and hugged the small body.

"We'll see your daddy in a few days," she repeated. "Oh, Glad, will he want us? You're to be my offering, my precious gift for him."

Randy and Dolly took them to the train. Lifting the baby from Marian's arms, Randy said, "You've got something here, Marian."

She laughed. "Naturally I think so." To herself she said, "I have done one perfect thing. It is enough to make up for all the things I didn't do?"
